

Jarett Attard

Jarett Attard is a real estate professional based out of San Diego who has thrived early in his career. As a past professional baseball player, he is no newcomer to the adversity and persistence that coincide with being a professional at any endeavor. Competitive sport, like business requires knowledge of the competition, attention to detail, and consistency. There is no play, like there is no transaction that deserves anything but best effort. Jarett's academic and athletic experience has translated into his real estate career which can be seen through his work ethic and calm demeanor, in an otherwise hectic field of work.

Jarett has a bachelor of science from Cal Poly Pomona where he played baseball for four years & studied business with an emphasis in Human resources. His business degree and background in HR have nurtured a strong basis for understanding the importance of communication and relationship building, which has proven to be beneficial during his relatively young real estate career. Exercise and well-being continue to be a large part of his life; he is very gracious with his time. Jarett enjoys playing golf, racket ball and really just about any game with a ball.

In addition to working for Attard Property Management, Jarett coaches youth baseball and is dedicated to sharing his knowledge and experience with the youth of the community. He manages over 70 homes around San Diego and handles the maintenance and marketing department of Attard Property Management. Jarett consistently exceeds the expectations of his clients and the majority of his clientele is referral based. Jarett sold over $1.5 million dollars of real estate in his first two years as an agent and is continuing to grow as a real estate professional.
